LEVEL I

Before Playing look at the Time Signature - Clap the rhythm.

Look at the complete line of music before beginning to play.
Play slowly, and read ahead.
For the first two levels, it is especially important to count out loud.

Notes on the first string.

FORM: Eight measures make up a musical period, usually divided into two four-measure phrases. The first is called the "antecedent phrase" and the second is called the "consequent phrase". It is very natural for a period to be divided into two equal parts, as in the following.

Feel the pulse of four beats per bar; accent counts 1 and 3.

Make an effort to play from the beginning to the end of a line without stopping.

Before Playing look at the Time Signature - Clap the rhythm.

Here the time signature of $\frac{3}{4}$ is introduced.

Feel the pulse of three beats per bar (rather than four) - accent the first beat of each bar.

Some of the more unusual phrase lengths, such as three or five measures, create lovely musical effects.

Watch for patterns of repeated notes. Read ahead.

It is common to find phrases of eight or more measures.

Look at the complete line of music before beginning to play.

Melodies with many repeated notes are very rhythmic. Feel the strong beats in each bar:

Before Playing look at the Time Signature - Clap the rhythm.

19

Always read ahead.

20

Strive to play every note clearly and sensitively.

21

The following two exercises introduce the notes 'A' and 'G', found on the 3rd string.
Be sure to count the tied notes for their full value.

23

Count to the end of the line, including the rests.

24

crescendo (cresc.) =
 decrescendo (decresc.) =

Before Playing look at the Time Signature - Clap the rhythm.

Be sure to count the tied notes for their full value.

The repeating two-measure rhythmic pattern (using syncopation) shapes the phrases.

When entering and leaving a phrase, you may increase and decrease the tempo. This will enhance the artistic effect.

Make a strong effort to play musically at all times.
To slow down, or ritard, the last phrase of a piece will often provide a very natural and musical ending.

LEVEL 2

Before Playing look at the Time Signature - Clap the rhythm.

Look at the complete line of music before beginning to play.
Play slowly, and read ahead.
For the first two levels, it is especially important to count out loud.

RANDOM NOTES (1-4)

Name all the notes in each line before you play.

The pick-up note (or "anacrusis") falls on a weak beat, and could be considered as an introductory note to the first complete measure. Feel the strong downbeat after the pick-up note. Notice that the last measure has only two beats. Where is the third beat?

The simplest little pieces can be played artistically.
Shape the phrases, add ritards, and use dynamics.

Before Playing look at the Time Signature - Clap the rhythm.

"C" means 'common time', and is the same as $\frac{4}{4}$.

Read ahead; feel the changing rhythms.

FORM: In music of two parts, each part is made distinct by the direction of the stems; use fingers for the upper part and thumb for the lower.

Phrase markings may be found above or below the notes, regardless of the direction of the stems.

The open bass strings.

13

Be sure to count the tied notes for their full value. Imagine a ritard in the last two measures.

14

Here the bass part (accompaniment) consists of only one repeated note; this is called a pedal.

15

Syncopated rhythms generally recur throughout a piece.

16

Use p, i, m, and a for the following.

17

Think about how you would phrase this little piece, before you begin to play.

18

Pick-up notes fall on a weak beat.

Single-line melodies in the lower part of the staff may be played with either the thumb (p) or the fingers (i, m).
